TABLE

Also in 1994, the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry published a study by the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) and the University of Colorado at Boulder. The study found that children who had been sexually abused by a family member had a higher risk of developing post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) than children who had been sexually abused by a stranger. The study also found that children who had been sexually abused by a family member had a higher risk of developing depression and anxiety disorders than children who had been sexually abused by a stranger.
